Introduction
As part of the WeHo Smart City Strategic Initiative, the City of West Hollywood ("City") is developing a data training program for City staff.

Data analytics is fast becoming one of the most sought-after skills, providing an extra edge to businesses and governments whose employees know how to gather and use data effectively. Establishing a culture of data within City Hall can improve customer service and user experience, boost the City's ability to make evidence-based decisions, and provide staff with enhanced professional knowledge.

For this Request for Proposals ("RFP"), the City seeks a team ("Team") to train staff in basic data skills, including data analytics, visualizations, storytelling and open data concepts using expert instructors with experience teaching data fundamentals in-person and online to students from a wide range of professional backgrounds and skill levels.

The City is looking for a qualified Team who understands the importance of using data to improve government services and programs. The maximum yearly budget for this training program is $40,000. Proposals may include tiered pricing options for varying levels of training.

For reference, the WeHo Smart City Strategic Plan is available for download at www.wehosmartcity.org.
