City of West Hollywood
Request for Qualifications (RFQ)
Civic Innovation and Smart City Consultants

Introduction
From time to time, the City of West Hollywood seeks assistance from creative professionals that can work on an "as needed" basis for a variety of innovation, data and design services. The City is currently gathering qualifications from interested professionals to establish a pool of individuals and firms who can provide such services to the City on an as-needed basis.

For example, the City of West Hollywood’s Innovation Division runs two programs which often need assistance from creative and technical contractors. WeHoX, the City’s Innovation program, encourages staff to think outside the box, bringing services and information to constituents in bold, new ways. WeHo Smart City, the City’s smart city strategic plan for implementation of future-forward technology, probes the City to incorporate data, workflow improvements, and technology pilot projects to enhance the services and programs we provide to our community.

Examples of needed ongoing civic innovation and smart city services include but are not limited to:

- developing simple websites,
- creating interactive maps,
- producing data visualizations,
- analyzing data sets,
- storytelling using data,
- creating infographics,
- artificial intelligence,
- producing animation and live video projects,
- developing or enhancing mobile applications,
- creating branded content,
- live scribing at meetings and events, and
- other emerging technologies.

Do you have a skill not listed above? Please submit your qualifications and tell the City how you can help us be innovative and creative. All ideas considered!
